Mall shooting victim targeted: Police

Eaton Centre killing. Family mourns Ahmed Hassan, 24, one of the victims of a lone gunman who opened fire in a busy mall food court

As investigators continued a manhunt Sunday for the suspect in the shooting rampage at the Eaton Centre, friends and family of the young man gunned down gathered at a downtown home to mourn him.

Groups of young women in brightly-coloured head scarves idled around the compound as the sun set; older women could be seen inside.

"I just can't (talk) right now … I'm sorry," a visibly distraught young woman said as she stood in the doorway. She identified herself as the sister of Ahmed Hassan, the 24-year-old man killed in Saturday's bloody shooting.

Detectives have since said that Hassan was known to police and that the shooting was targeted. He was believed to have gang ties.

Hassan was killed instantly when a gunman opened fire at Eaton Centre's food court around 6:30 p.m. on Saturday. Seven others were injured, including a 13-year-old boy who was visiting from Port Hope. The shooting also triggered pandemonium inside the mall as hundreds ran for their lives.

The shooter is now the subject of one of the largest manhunts in Toronto's history, which includes dozens of homicide detectives spanning many divisions.

Detectives spent all of Saturday night and Sunday at the Eaton Centre trying to piece together the sequence of events. They watched surveillance footage. They interviewed eyewitnesses.

Gang links explored

"Whether this is a gang-motivated shooting has not been definitely determined, but I can say that it is closely being looked at given that at least one of the victims has known gang associations." Det. Sgt. Brian Borg

Acting Deputy Chief Jeff McGuire said multiple teams of investigators are involved, including homicide, the Guns and Gangs Task Force and several divisions. "We have pulled in all the resources we have at hand," McGuire said.

What police did not do is release a description of the suspect and details such as the type of weapon used and how the shooter escaped the mall. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Aftermath

Business goes on near scene of shooting

A day after the downtown Eaton Centre food court erupted in a flurry of gunfire, leaving one man dead and two critically wounded, the bustling scene at Yonge Street and Dundas Street West returned to some semblance of normalcy.

Groups of tourists posed for pictures in the pedestrian plaza adjacent to Sears, and dinner-goers dined at open-air restaurants, unconcerned with the brazen act of violence that occurred metres away 24 hours earlier.

"There does seem to be a lot of activity," said Abigail Gamble, communications manager for the Downtown Yonge Business Improvement Area.

"Police did such a good job of managing the situation; that is what's giving people the confidence to come back out on the street. They realize that this isn't something that happens every day."

Several area businesses reported fewer patrons Sunday, which they attributed to the mall's closure.

"This is more of a shock to the community, than a shock to the business," said Jason King of Salad King, on Yonge north of the Eaton Centre.

Samuel Getachew lights candles during a vigil at Yonge-Dundas Square on Sunday for the people injured in the Toronto Eaton Centre shooting. Sasha Valentine was shoe shopping at the Eaton Centre when she heard the shots.

"I heard shooting, saw people screaming, running to our levels," she said. "I was freaked out, shaking and crying."

Yet one day later she was back, standing at Dundas and Yonge, joining Torontonians in an effort to reclaim the space they know as their own.

"You know what? I'm still going to the Eaton Centre," she said. "I'm not going to stop because of one stupid act."

A sheet of white paper with pink flowers scrawled with messages in black pen was taped to the centre's rotating glass doors.

"I wish that was the last," said one message. "Peace is on the way," said another.

Across the street, a vigil was taking place in Yonge-Dundas Square. There was a small crowd of people, some holding clear plastic cups with tea candles inside.

Four policemen on bikes stood close by, casting long shadows in the evening sun.

"There is a feeling of helplessness," said vigil organizer Karen Ho. "The person who died was very close in age to myself."

Cheri DiNovo, MPP for Parkdale-High Park, said earlier in the morning at church she prayed for the shooter to turn himself in.

"It's shocking and it's sad," she said. "It's our community's hurt."

Jennifer Wiechen used to work in the Eaton Centre, a place she describes as home.

"I know a lot of people there," she said. "It's a sad day for the Eaton Centre, it's a sad day for Toronto."

Many people, like Spencer Hotton, a 21-year-old welder, were calling for an end to violence.

"We have the right to be safe, we have the right to be happy," he said.

The mall will reopen Monday, but the food court is expected to remain closed.

Update on victims

Police suspect one victim, a 23-year-old man who suffered multiple gunshot wounds to the neck and chest and remains hospitalized in critical condition, may have been a target and also have gang ties.

At Sick Kids, police said a 13-year-old boy with a gunshot wound to the head was still critical "but better."

At St. Michael's Hospital, Moniruz Zaman said his niece Tasnia Mahmood, 25, was recovering well after being hit in the left leg.

A 28-year-old pregnant woman, who went into labour after she was knocked down in the stampede following the shooting, was released from hospital Sunday without having the baby. St. Michael's spokesperson Cyndy DeGiufti couldn't say how many months pregnant the woman was.

Two women and a man injured in the shooting have been released from hospital.

Mixed martial arts hits T.O. mats

Amateur tournament. AMMA event on the weekend, the city's first

toronto@metronews.ca

Four months after the Ontario government gave its stamp of approval to amateur mixed martial arts matches, the province's first-ever such event took place at the Toronto Pro Supershow in downtown Toronto over the weekend.

Sixty-eight amateur athletes, including kids as young as 10 from across the country went head-to-head in the full contact combat sport that combines techniques from boxing, kickboxing, wrestling, jiu jitsu, Muay Thai, taekwondo, karate and judo.

Daniel Kechego made history on Saturday, winning the first bout at Ontario's first-ever sanctioned amateur MMA tournament. Kechego, who grew up on the Chippewas of the Thames First Nation, near London, and now trains full-time in Cambridge, says that despite the sport's notoriety for violence, he always feels very positive energy. "We all have the same goals and dedication, so we're all family," said the 18-year-old.

Kechego along with his final opponent Matt Kippenhuck of Newfoundland have their sights set on turning professional. "This is the first amateur fight for me and I'd like to get at least five more fights before turning pro," said a disappointed Kippenhuck.

Muzammal Nawaz, president of the Council of Amateur Sport Kickboxing, now tasked with governing amateur MMA, credits the televised Ultimate Fighting Championship with the recent surge in popularity of MMA, saying that since February's announcement, interest from clubs across the country has been huge. "Now that it's sanctioned, there is going to be a gradual growth rate of the industry maturing the way other sports do," says Nawaz.

Standardizing the rules

- New regulations require clubs to be insured and coaches to get police checks and undergo various courses including first aid.
- Kickboxing Ontario will sanction every event and appoint a chief official who can shut down any competition that doesn't follow the rules.

Daniel Kechego and Matt Kippenhuck go head-to-head in the first bout at Ontario's first amateur MMA tournament at the Toronto Pro Supershow on Saturday. HEATHER BUCHAN/FOR METRO

Cyclists ride into the heart of the city

More than 13,000 cyclists took part in the 25th anniversary of Becel Heart and Stroke Ride for Heart Sunday along the Gardiner and Don Valley Parkway in support of heart disease and stroke research. The Heart and Stroke Foundation says a Canadian dies every seven minutes from heart disease or stroke. This year, Ride for Heart raised $5 million, the highest amount ever raised during the ride and a $1.1-million increase from 2011. COLIN MCCONNELL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Good neighbours. Funds raised for orphaned boys

Four young girls sat on a bench, cheering on runners and trying to make sense of something a young girl — or boy — never should.

"I think it's good for the boys to be here because it kind of gets their mind off what happened," said 10-year-old Bailey McLaughlin.

What happened shocked a tight-knit community in Oakville and devastated the family and friends of 43-year-old Katherine Newman, who was found stabbed to death last January in her Treetop Terrace townhome. Her estranged husband Kyle Newman was later shot dead by police, a matter now in the hands of the provincial Special Investigations Unit.

Strides for Friends

"No one can replace this emotional trauma, but we can just show we care."
Neighbour Klaudia Thibeault

Many people were affected. But three lives changed the most — those of the Newman boys: Thomas, 12, Joshua, 10, and eight-year-old James.

"It's just been awful," said Liz Benoit, one of Newman's close friends.

On Sunday, a walk/run fundraiser, "Strides for Friends," was held at the boys' old school, Mother Teresa in Oakville, to raise money for their education. It was organized by Newman's circle of girlfriends, a 20-woman coffee group.

"It was all about let's have fun and let's have a good day for Katherine," said organizer Barb Crawford. "And let the boys know the community is always here. They're always welcome."

Some 400 people participated in the five- and 10-kilometre events, including the brothers themselves. The total amount raised won't be known for a couple of days — but relatives say it will surely help.

"I'm so grateful," said Walter Stayshyn, Newman's father.

The boys are now in the care of Newman's brother, Ted Stayshyn, who lives in Dundas with three kids of his own.

Manhunt continues after Magnotta spotted in France

Body-parts case. French newspaper reports police were able to trace suspect's itinerary through cellphone activity

Murder victim Jun Lin
FACEBOOK

The suspect in the gruesome killing and dismemberment of a Chinese student in Montreal was spotted in France over the weekend but police aren't ruling out the possibility he could still be on the move.

Montreal police confirmed Sunday that Luka Rocco Magnotta was in the European country as recently as Friday.

"The man was seen in France, that's what French authorities told us," police spokesman Ian Lafreniere told reporters.

Lafreniere cautioned that Magnotta may no longer be in France, and wouldn't rule out the possibility he had since returned to Canada or headed elsewhere in Europe.

"He's someone who has been known to travel, so we're not taking any chances and we want to keep an open mind," Lafreniere said. "We've received more than 360 tips — it's huge, people really want to help."

Magnotta, 29, is wanted in the slaying of Jun Lin, 33, who was a student at Montreal's Concordia University. Lin's torso was found in a suitcase that had been left out for garbage collection outside Magnotta's Montreal apartment last week. Other severed body parts, including a hand and a foot, were mailed to the offices of political parties in Ottawa.

French media reported Sunday that personal belongings of the porn actor were found in a hotel in suburban Paris. The reports said police discovered pornographic magazines as well as air-sickness bags from the flight he took to Paris from Montreal.

Police believe Magnotta fled to France on May 26.

Military. Tories redraw defence spending plans

The Harper government is redrafting its extensive, multi-billion shopping list of equipment for the Canadian military in an exercise many observers believe will set more sober expectations in a time of austerity.

The revision to the Canada First Defence Strategy is slated to be complete and ready for public consumption by fall, multiple sources have told The Canadian Press.

Although Defence Minister Peter MacKay describes the hallmark plan as a "living document," the reset comes at a time when the government has been hammered politically over the F-35 stealth fighter, an issue that tarnished the fiscally responsible image that the Conservatives try to project.

Defence sources say there is a baseline expectation that the promises made in the original 2008 document will be mostly kept, but whether the government will be buying in the quantities outlined at the height of the Afghan war is another matter.

Insiders believe that a redrafted wish list will take some of the bite out of opposition attacks and restore public confidence rattled by the F-35.

Zimmerman back in Florida jail

George Zimmerman, the neighbourhood-watch volunteer charged with murder in the killing of an unarmed black teenager, surrendered to police Sunday and was booked into jail after having his bail revoked two days earlier.

The shooting of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin sparked protests across the U.S., and spurred debate about whether race was a factor in Zimmerman's actions and in the initial police handling of the case. Martin was black; Zimmerman's father is white and his mother is from Peru.

Zimmerman's legal team said in a tweet that he was in police custody. Zimmerman's bail was revoked because the judge said he and his wife lied to the court about their finances so he could obtain a lower bond.

On Sunday afternoon, about 40 minutes before the posted deadline to surrender, Zimmerman was listed as an inmate on the jail website. He was listed as being held without bail and having $500 in his jail account.

Seminole County Sheriff Donald Eslinger said Zimmerman turned himself in to two sheriff's office employees around 1:25 p.m. near the jail, and was then driven to the jail.

Attorney Mark O'Mara announced earlier Sunday on his website that Zimmerman had arrived in Florida late Saturday evening ahead of his surrender. Zimmerman, who is charged with second-degree murder in the fatal shooting of Martin, was ordered by a judge Friday to return to jail.

'Stand your ground' law

- Zimmerman has pleaded not guilty to the second-degree murder charge.
- He maintains he shot Martin in self-defence under Florida's so-called "stand your ground" law because the unarmed teen attacked him after a confrontation in a gated community outside Orlando.

Queen celebrates Diamond Jubilee on River Thames

London. More than one million spectators line the London river in the rain to salute Queen Elizabeth II's 60 years on the throne

The River Thames became a royal highway Sunday, as Queen Elizabeth II led a motley but majestic flotilla of more than 1,000 vessels in a waterborne pageant to mark her Diamond Jubilee.

In a colourful salute to the island nation's maritime past, an armada of skiffs and sailboats, rowboats and paddle steamers joined a flower-festooned royal barge down an 11-kilometre stretch of London's river.

With a crowd of rain-soaked spectators estimated by organizers at 1.25 million, the pageant was the largest public event in four days of celebrations of the monarch's 60 years on the throne. Monday, the queen will join thousands of revellers at an outdoor concert beside Buckingham Palace, headlined by pop royalty including Paul McCartney and Elton John.

With any luck, the weather will improve. Sunday was dismal and damp, with rain scuttling plans for a ceremonial flypast, but that didn't stop Union Jack-waving spectators forming a red, white and blue wave along the pageant route.

The queen travelled down a river transformed during her reign, from the commercial and industrial heart of London to a tourist's playground. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tension building in Egyptian election race

An Egyptian presidential candidate, Ahmed Shafiq, who was the last prime minister in the regime deposed by last year's popular revolution, lashed out at his Islamist rival Sunday, warning he and his fundamentalist group would monopolize power and take Egypt back to "the dark ages."

It was a sign that the runoff race between Shafiq and the Muslim Brotherhood's Mohammed Morsi was turning into a bitter contest over who could frighten the voters of his rival more. The two face off in a June 16-17 vote.

"The Brotherhood represents darkness and secrecy. No one knows who they are or what they are doing. I represent dialogue and tolerance."

Shafiq spoke a day after his mentor, Mubarak, and ex-security chief Habib el-Adly were sentenced to life in prison for failing to stop the killing of some 900 protesters during the 18-day uprising last year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vatican leaks continue despite butler's arrest

Holy See. Pope Benedict celebrates mass for one million followers as fuel added to scandal

Pope Benedict XVI celebrated an open-air mass for one million cheering faithful Sunday, capping a weekend visit to Milan viewed as a respite from a Vatican scandal, but fresh leaks of Holy See documents have only fuelled the intrigue.

If the new leaks are authentic, the development could indicate that the recent arrest of the Pope's butler might not have stemmed the scandal as top Holy See officials had hoped.

The three-day visit to Milan during a weekend of Catholic events meant to boost support for families was also an opportunity for the 85-year-old pontiff to show he is still firmly at the helm of his church. On Sunday, Benedict announced that he hoped to go to Philadelphia in 2015 for a similar pro-family event.

The weekend had been viewed as a welcome break from the so-called "Vatileaks" scandal. Benedict appeared relaxed and at ease throughout the visit.

But the leaks continued even during his trip, with the daily La Repubblica publishing documents on Sunday it said it received despite the butler's arrest.

One of the letters was a high prelate's complaint that he had not been consulted on the approval of a liturgy for a Catholic group in Spain, while two others reportedly bear the signature of the Pope's secretary.

Jet crashes into crowded Nigeria neighbourhood, killing 153

Deadly accident. Challenges of life in Nigeria underscored — not enough water available to douse smouldering wreckage

A commercial airliner crashed into a densely populated neighbourhood in Nigeria's largest city, killing all 153 people on board and others on the ground in the worst air disaster in nearly two decades for the troubled nation.

The cause of the Dana Air crash was unknown Sunday, as firefighters and police in Lagos struggled to put out the flames around the wreckage of the Boeing MD83 aircraft. Authorities could not control the crowd of thousands gathered around to see the crash site, with some crawling over the plane's broken wings and standing on a still-smouldering landing gear.

Harold Demuren, the director-general of Nigeria's Civil Aviation Authority, said all on board the flight were killed in the crash. Lagos state government said in a statement that 153 people were on the flight travelling from Nigeria's central capital of Abuja to Lagos in the nation's southwest.

The flight's pilots radioed to the Lagos control tower just before the crash, saying the plane had engine trouble, a military official said. The official spoke on condition of anonymity as he was not authorized to speak to journalists.

Rescue officials feared many others were killed or injured on the ground, but no casualty figures were immediately available. Firefighters and local residents were seen carrying the corpse of a man from one building, its walls still crumbling and flames shooting from its roof more than an hour after the crash.

President Goodluck Jonathan later declared three days of national mourning in Africa's most populous nation.

Turks protest plan to curb abortion

Thousands of demonstrators on Sunday staged the largest protest yet against plans by Turkey's Islamic-rooted government to curb abortion, which critics say will amount to a virtual ban.

Around 3,000 women, ranging from around 20 to 60 years old, gathered at a square in Istanbul's Kadikoy district. Some carried banners that read "My body, my choice" and shouted anti-government slogans.

Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan has called abortion "murder," and his government is reportedly working on legislation to ban the operation after 4 weeks from conception, except in emergencies.

Abortion is presently legal in Turkey up to 10 weeks from conception.

Analysts say Erdogan is pursuing a delicate strategy of beefing up Turkey's regional power with a large population, while trying to balance the country's demographics in the face of a high birth rate among the country's Kurds.

Ontario man dies after bridge fall

60-metre plunge. Tourist may have climbed over safety fence at Vancouver suspension bridge

MATT KIELTYKA
Metro in Vancouver

Police and staff at the Capilano Suspension Bridge are extending their condolences to the family of a St. Catharines, Ont. tourist who fell 60 metres to his death Saturday.

The 30-year-old man, whose name has not been released, apparently climbed over the railing of the suspended Cliff Walk feature at the North Vancouver park but slipped and fell onto the canyon floor below around 5:50 p.m.

The victim had been on vacation with extended family. North Vancouver RCMP say they're looking into whether the man had climbed over the safety fencing to retrieve a credit card.

"We were taking statements from witnesses and heard (about the credit card) as well," said RCMP spokesperson Cpl. Richard De Jong on Sunday. "It's a very tragic incident, but it's not a police investigation at this point as there doesn't seem to be any criminal intent."

The park was closed for the rest of the day as police investigated and search-and-rescue crews recovered the man's body. It was re-opened Sunday, and counsellors were on hand to help any traumatized staff.

Not cricket. Actor says he's sorry for calling sport 'gay'

Actor Jason Alexander has apologized for joking during a TV talk show that he considers cricket to be a "gay" sport.

In a blog post, the former Seinfeld star explained Sunday what led to his remark on CBS's Late Late Show. He writes that he at first didn't grasp why some might object to the comment, but subsequent conversations with his gay friends led him to realize his insensitivity.

Alexander's remarks came in Friday's show in which he tells host Craig Ferguson that aspects of cricket make it a "gay game" compared to other sports.

The actor's 1,000-word-plus "message of amends" says that the joking remark plays into "hurtful assumptions and diminishments" about people. He also writes that as an actor with many gay friends, he "should know better."

Helicopter crash. Officials clear wreckage from B.C. site

Investigators are braving dangerous avalanche conditions while removing the wreckage of a helicopter crash in northwestern, B.C.

Three people were killed Friday when the A-Star 350 helicopter went down on Sleeping Beauty Mountain near Terrace, B.C.

Police say investigators encountered a small snow slide during the recovery of the bodies Saturday.

They say Transportation Safety Board investigators continue to remove wreckage from the crash site.

Bailey Helicopters has confirmed that one of the pilots killed in the crash was 45-year-old Peter Bryant.

Police say they have now identified all three men killed in the crash but won't confirm their identities until next of kin have been notified.

Sexy safe-driving ads crash, burn with women's advocates

'Bridget'. Face of Halifax Harbour Bridges' ad campaign offending feminist organizations

Some say she's a confident, crime-fighting avenger, devoted to protecting drivers in Atlantic Canada's largest city.

Oh, and she does it while looking good in heels.

But others say "Bridget" — the fictional face of a sexy, safe-driving ad campaign in Halifax — is an offensive stereotype that succeeds only in insulting men and degrading women.

In particular, the campaign has crashed and burned with women's rights advocates, who argue women have for too long been objectified in advertising and the media.

"We were quite surprised and disappointed with the approach," said Irene Smith, executive director of the Avalon Sexual Assault Centre, a feminist organization in Halifax. "It just seems to me that it's offensive to many, many women who've experienced any form of sexual violence or harassment or been subjected to sexist jokes and innuendoes."

Halifax Harbour Bridges launched the campaign May 14 to raise awareness of speeding, tailgating and texting while driving on the two bridges that span the city's harbour.

"We wanted to have a campaign that's a little humorous, tongue-in-cheek, and we also wanted the messages to come from a person and not an organization," said communications manager Alison MacDonald, adding the commission wanted to get people's attention with "a strong, female character." - Halifax Harbour Bridges is a commission of the Nova Scotia government, but receives no funding from taxpayers. The $50,000 campaign was funded by bridge tolls, said communications manager Alison MacDonald.

Buffett hopes lunch auction raises big bucks

It's true that Warren Buffett hired the hedge fund manager who won the last two private lunches with him that are part of an annual auction, but he doesn't expect the event to become a recruiting tool for Berkshire Hathaway.

Rather, Buffett says it's miraculous that he found one of Berkshire's two new investment managers through the lunch. He offered Ted Weschler a job after he'd paid nearly $5.3 million over two years to dine with Buffett.

Buffett said he just hopes the 13th annual online auction will again raise a significant amount of money for the Glide Foundation, which provides social services to the poor and homeless in San Francisco. Bidding begins Sunday on eBay and continues into Friday evening. Most of the big bids tend to arrive late in the auction.

Interest rate hike? Experts think not

Economic outlook. Friday's report on Canadian GDP showed a 1.9 per cent growth, well below the central bank's April call for a 2.5 per cent advance

Economy

Carney's previous signal on interests rates was predicated on the assumption that Canada's growth rate would smoothly expand at about 2.5 per cent throughout 2012, enabling the economy to return to full capacity in the first half of 2013.

Is the next move for Mark Carney to cut interest rates?

The question would have seemed unthinkable a few weeks ago given that the Bank of Canada governor's last pronouncement on the subject was to issue a wink and a nudge about coming hikes.

The signal-sending language — "some modest withdrawal of the present considerable monetary policy surplus may be appropriate" — contained in the April interest-setting statement sent markets into speculation hyper-drive that rates could be heading north as early as the summer. Tuesday's upcoming announcement was never in play and isn't in play now.

Economists are as unanimous as can be that Carney will keep the policy rate moored at one per cent a little while longer. But now the speculation has turned full circle about the nature of the next move, whenever it comes.

"The state of the world is increasingly making clear that a rate hike at this point would be premature," said Avery Shenfeld, chief economist with CIBC World Markets. The revived crisis in Greece, the growing banking crisis in Spain, unresolved debt problems in Italy and Portugal, had already lengthened the odds on Carney moving this fall.

Trade. EU demands prompt premiers to seek compensation

The provincial premiers have undertaken a letter-writing campaign to demand compensation from the federal government for any increase in drug costs that might come of a free trade agreement with Europe.

B.C. Premier Christy Clark says she and other premiers have each written to Ottawa urging federal negotiators not to agree to anything that would drive up the cost of pharmaceuticals.

TIME TO TALK ABOUT BUILDING SUBWAYS, AGAIN

URBAN COMPASS
Matt Elliott
toronto@metronews.ca

After the city council equivalent of a back alley knife fight, plans for transit expansion in Toronto are finally showing signs of life. But there's a dirty little secret about the light rail lines set for North York, Etobicoke and Scarborough that no one wants to talk about: by funneling new riders onto jam-packed trains on the Yonge subway line, these necessary additions to our transit system could actually make things worse for thousands of already-frustrated commuters.

In other words: imagine your current squished subway ride with a few thousand more close-quarters friends.

To combat this nightmare scenario, Toronto needs to wade back into a conversation about transit expansion. It's time to talk about building subways again.

No, not the fantasy subways Mayor Rob Ford pushed for. His scheme — never funded — called for all-suburban underground lines that may have lost the TTC tens of millions of dollars in unrecoverable operating costs. Instead, politicians and planners need to turn their attention back to an idea for subway expansion that's been kicking around since the 1980s.

Transit geeks have called it 'the downtown relief line,' but former mayoral candidate Sarah Thomson, who's been putting together a campaign designed to build support for the new subway line, likes to refer to it as 'the city subway loop.' It's a name that better recognizes the line's far-reaching benefits.

As Thomson and other supporters see it, the new route would form a large 'U,' covering a vast section of downtown and the suburbs. Starting in the east-end at Eglinton and Don Mills, the subway would head south to connect through Leslieville. From there, it would turn west through downtown, stopping in the heart of the financial distract via Wellington Street. In the west, the line would curve back up toward Eglinton and Keele.

It just might be the most important infrastructure project Toronto can build right now.

In Thomson's estimation, this is the only project that can "really put a dent in Toronto's gridlock," making for a network that can actually accommodate demand from riders. "Transit systems are like the blood systems in the body," she says. "If the heart isn't working well, you get problems in all the other arteries."

By all accounts, the heart of Toronto's transit system — the ever-crowded Yonge subway — isn't doing so well. The city subway loop, endorsed by virtually every transit expert in Toronto, looks to be the best long-term fix — especially with expansion looming.

But before commuters can board the new trains, the plan needs support from politicians, business leaders and riders. And, most critically, the city needs a workable funding plan that can put construction on track.

Coming up next week: How to fund the subway line Toronto desperately needs.

Bus driver hailed as hero after controlling vehicle despite deadly wound

Chinese are hailing a bus driver who maintained control of his vehicle and ensured passengers' safety despite being struck by a chunk of iron that smashed through his windscreen while driving a bus near Beijing last week.

Wu Bin ultimately died of his injuries from Tuesday's freak accident, but not before braking, shifting gears and telling passengers not to wander onto the highway. His hometown of Hangzhou in eastern China has praised him as a hero and a role model.

Dramatic security camera footage broadcast Sunday on state television showed the object hitting Wu and his calm handling of the situation, despite being in obvious pain. Wu died Friday.

China has a history of praising acts of selflessness and courage to inspire responsibility in an increasingly competitive and sometimes callous society.

'Little angels' rush to senior citizen's side after fall on subway platform

News Worth Sharing

Media will always have to report on the tough stuff. But we know that Canada is full of compassionate individuals, inspiring projects and stories worth celebrating. Here's just one.

Fay, a senior citizen, has been living in Toronto for more than 30 years — plenty of time to become somewhat jaded by the rudeness on sidewalks and in transit that typically comes with "life in the big city."

Recently, however, her views changed. On her way to a doctor's appointment, Fay slipped and fell on the bus platform level of the Sheppard subway station. It was around 4 p.m. — dismissal time for the elementary school cohort. Two young boys rushed to Fay's side and hovered over her, fussing, "like a mother hen with her chicks, which was so comforting," she says. Fay calls the anonymous pair "little angels," who stayed with her until an ambulance arrived. She was in such shock that she forgot to ask their names, or to say thank you. In addition to her heartfelt thanks, Fay promises "a big meal with all the trimmings," if they should ever meet again. Are you Fay's 'little angels?' Email us and we'll put you in touch.

Corey Hart's comeback a point of 'pride' for singer

Remix. Sunglasses at Night singer gets inspired to remake Truth Will Set You Free and bring its gay-positive message to the forefront

If you go...

- The performance. Hart's Toronto show will take place June 30 — a free, open-air festival gig with the capacity to squeeze in 3,000 fans.

When Corey Hart included Truth Will Set You Free on his 1988 album Young Man Running, few among his legions of fans likely realized that the song was intended as a gay-positive anthem of affirmation for anyone struggling with his or her sexuality.

For one thing, the Montreal-born pop star wanted it that way. He was intentionally cryptic in the lyrics of the soaring tune, couching the true meaning of its be-yourself-at-all-costs mantra in subtext. The reason for the secrecy? Hart wanted to protect the close friend who had inspired the song, someone whose sexuality was a source of self-doubt and pain.

Now, Hart is issuing a dance floor-friendly remix of the tune, one which swaps the contemplative soft-rock of the original for an icy club groove and pulls those themes that coursed under the original's surface to the fore with new lyrics inspired, in part, by the 1998 murder of gay university student Matthew Shepard.

And to make positively sure those newly prominent themes resonate, Hart — who willingly receded from the musical spotlight to raise his children — will mark his first Canadian performance in a decade during Toronto's Pride festival.

"The gay aspect of this song was an important message that I wanted to send out there, especially being a straight man — I thought it was important to say this," he added. "It was important for me to be at a gay pride event and to go out there and sing the song, and spread the message of the song."

But it certainly wasn't a typical journey to get to this point.

The idea to re-record his 24-year-old song began with an unsolicited email request from a DJ whom Hart had never heard of. Since launching an official website last year, Hart receives dozens of pitches each week from people who want to remix or sample his tunes, and he almost always says no.

This request was different. For one thing, 1Love — whose real name is Paul Todd — wasn't writing in regard to either Sunglasses at Night or Never Surrender. Hart was intrigued, but it wasn't until he got to know Todd that he became persuaded to revisit the track.

Todd wasn't a "successful Donald Trump-type" running some big production company, as Hart puts it, but a music lover from Kingston, Ont., who was driving a cab at night to support his four kids.

Even though Hart was initially a "little put off" with Todd's first attempt at tackling a new version of the song, their personalities clicked.

By then, Hart had made up his mind to issue his first single in 12 years. "I became attached to wanting the song to come out, wanting the song to be heard — and also wanting to help him."

Hart felt that Todd's early remix didn't have enough musicality to it, so he sent it to musician friends in Toronto and Montreal who added textures until the gleaming song found its pulse. Perhaps more important to Hart was the opportunity to re-record his vocals with new lyrics.

"I felt (it was) necessary to take the song much further than I had in 1988," Hart said.

Snow White is the fairest of them all

Snow White & the Huntsman triumphed at the weekend box office. According to studio estimates Sunday, Universal Pictures' action yarn inspired by the fairy-tale princess debuted strongly at No. 1 with $56.3 million domestically. That's about $20 million higher than industry expectations. Snow White bumped Sony's Men in Black 3 from the top spot and into second-place with $29.3 million. The Will Smith-Tommy Lee Jones sequel raised its total to $112.3 million after two weekends. Disney's superhero sensation The Avengers remained strong at No. 3 with $20.3 million, lifting its domestic total to $552.7 million. The Avengers climbed past The Dark Knight at $533.3 million to become No. 3 all-time on the domestic revenue chart, behind Avatar at $760.5 million and Titanic at $658.5 million.

Samberg won't return as a cast member next season, according to his publicist, Carrie Byalick. Samberg's exit follows that of SNL cast member Kristen Wiig.

Like other Saturday Night Live alumni, Samberg will be seen on the big screen. His new movie with Adam Sandler, That's My Boy, is out this month.

William Shatner's weird world

Where no man has gone before. The 81-year-old icon gears up for another season of Weird or What?

William Shatner's back for another round of Weird or What? MATT SAYLES/THE CANADIAN PRESS

From hosting the Junos in Ottawa to a multi-city U.S. tour of his Broadway show, William Shatner has been a man on the move for much of 2012 with a red-hot career that leaves little time for respite.

The week ahead is no exception as the Canadian pop culture icon prepares to head to Johannesburg for work with plans to eke out a few days for a photographic safari in the interior.

"I'm really excited by that. What I'm not excited about is a 22-hour airplane ride," the affable actor said candidly from his home in Los Angeles.

Despite his stacked schedule, the tireless 81-year-old continues to have a hands-on role with William Shatner's Weird or What? which is back for a third season beginning today at 10 p.m. ET on History Television. Shatner is host and executive producer of the series which explores true-life tales of the unknown and unexplainable, and features first-person accounts, expert commentary and reconstructions of the mysterious events in question.

In addition to narrating Weird or What? and delivering tongue-in-cheek quips onscreen, Shatner said he's active behind the scenes, consulting on stories and looking at scripts.

"It's more than just a couple of weeks of working on the show as the wrap-around. I'm intimately involved in the show, so there's no telling how much time that takes," he said.

Tonight's spine-tingling episode chronicles real-life accounts of human encounters with beastly creatures, including a New Jersey mother and son seeing the fabled Jersey Devil.

The "massively interesting" stories featured on Weird or What all pique the interest of the inquisitive Shatner. Even as he peruses scripts, Shatner said he tries to seek out his own explanations for unusual happenings. He's also fascinated by the notions of multiple and alternate universes and the bending of time.

"Since we know nothing and everything is mysterious, the explanations for mysterious events assume an even more unknown quantity," said Shatner. "So we try to explain scientifically what may have happened in a mysterious event, but we can't be sure that that is the explanation."

Reading in the time of the digital age: Oprah's Book Club goes 2.0

Latest Version. Winfrey's project will feature memoir Wild in special e-edition format that includes comments from Oprah herself

Oprah Winfrey is back in the book club business, updated for the digital age.

Oprah's Book Club 2.0, a joint project of Winfrey's OWN network and her O magazine, begins Monday with the popular memoir Wild, Cheryl Strayed's story of her 1,100-mile hike along the Pacific Crest Trail in California and Washington. Besides the traditional paper version, featuring the circular Oprah book club logo, special e-editions will be made available that include Winfrey's comments and a reader's guide.

An interview with Strayed will air July 22 on OWN's Super Soul Sunday and on Oprah Radio. Readers will be able to share opinions through Facebook and Twitter and Winfrey's website, www.oprah.com.

"This is way different from the old book club," Winfrey said in an online video announcement, taped in her Chicago office and posted Friday on her website. "This time it's an interactive, online club for our digital world."

The new club will test whether Winfrey still has clout with the reading public, especially when her viewership is far smaller than years ago. Starting in the mid-1990s, Winfrey made hits out of dozens of books through her previous club, featured on her syndicated talk show. But sales had fallen by the time her show ended, in 2011. One of her last picks, a combined volume of Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities and Great Expectations, was in part a victim of the e-book market as many readers simply downloaded free, public-domain versions of the novels.

The initial response to Friday's announcement was slow compared to Winfrey's peak, when her choices topped bestseller charts within hours of her revealing them. As of Friday night, "Wild," had received a mild bump on Amazon.com's list, from No. 175 before Winfrey's pick to No. 97. "Wild" ranked No. 244 late Friday on the Kindle e-book charts.

Wild was published in March by Alfred A. Knopf, an imprint of Random House Inc.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Justin Bieber

Justin Bieber takes a backstage tumble

Justin Bieber is recovering from a possible concussion and a bruised ego after walking into a glass wall backstage at a Paris concert, according to TMZ. The singer returned to the stage to finish his set, but he reportedly lost consciousness briefly backstage after the show. Local doctors diagnosed him with a concussion. Bieber is taking it well, though, posting on Twitter, "Just smacked my head and needed some water. All good. I'm Canadian. We are tough." This isn't the first time Bieber has been fooled by the translucent nature of glass walls and doors. Online video clips show him walking into the glass partition of a revolving door in 2010 and a glass wall at a radio station office later that year.

We're finally worried about Charlie Sheen

THE WORD
Monica Weymouth
scene@metronews.ca

Brooke Mueller has landed herself back in rehab, but the situation might not be as bad as it seems.

Despite a history of drug abuse and saying "I do" to Charlie Sheen, the sometimes-actress' lawyers say the stay is a perfectly routine "pre-planned event," and that reports of a crack-cocaine binge with her ex-husband are entirely false.

For his part, Sheen doesn't know who he agrees with just yet — but that doesn't mean he won't attempt to talk about it.

Here's his statement on the matter to TMZ: "I can't speak to anyone's opinion or judgement. I was there, they were not, their tepid hearsay is a baseless static drone.

"A mantra, their theme. I refuse to be held hostage by their 'constitutional' privilege, to judge those who can and who do. nabobs. CS"

It took a while, but we are finally confused by the choices of Charlie Sheen. This man is a professional Drunkest Guy Last Night, and yet this is the statement he releases?

Charlie, this is familiar territory: sleep in, take a shower, throw on a little bronzer and surface in gym clothes with a leafy bag from Whole Foods. This showing-up-to-breakfast-in-sunglasses stuff is for amateurs.

Has he learned nothing?
When asked who will play him in the inevitable biopic, Bill Clinton generously settled on George Clooney during an interview on Piers Morgan Tonight.

Now, as for Hillary? He'd like to cast Meryl Streep.

We think this was a compliment, but Bill, trust us: assuming you're still around for a next time, the answer you are looking for here is "Angelina Jolie, Charlize Theron or a young Heidi Klum."

Got a big family? Here's how to save time and money

Have a daughter? Don't cut her bangs. Once you start cutting bangs, you're a slave to trimming them.

Don't buy bikes with white wheels. If you get your princess a pink bike with white wheels, little brother may be reluctant to take it on when sister outgrows it. Sacrifice glitter and ribbons for a good hand-me-down situation.

Have your babies close in age. This year, I had three kids on the SAME hockey team. This means only one rink at one time.

Don't cheap out on big-ticket items. If you buy your first kid a cheap bike, it's not going to get through the rest of your clan. You're better off buying top-quality baby products and sports equipment.

Father's Day gift: The 52 Reasons I Love You Jar

Looking for the perfect Father's Day gift? The 52 Reasons I Love You Jar is a great idea! This is a three-ingredient activity that kids can make as a gift for Dad — that keeps giving.

Grab a jar, paper and crayons. Have your child write out 52 hand-written notes using the prompt "I love you because …" (I love you because you take me to soccer, I love you because you tell fart jokes, I love you because you read to me ...)

Drop them into the jar. Dad can choose one note each week for the next year. This activity gives kids an opportunity to think about why Dad is special. It's a great way for kids to practice handwriting and brainstorming. And it's free!

When yes is better than no

First response. Saying no comes naturally when children ask for anything outside of the master plan, but it can stifle development

JENNIFER KOLARI
yummymummyclub.ca

"Mommy, let's have a picnic lunch under the dining room table.

"Why would we do that when we have a table?" I said without even looking up from my emails and piled-up paperwork.

"Why not?" asked my daughter.

I tore myself away from the screen to look at her. She was flushed with excitement. Even the ends of her hair seemed to be electrified as she bounced from foot to foot, imploring me with her cockeyed smile

"Sure, let's do it!" I said.

She was surprised by my answer. We ate, played games and giggled, and I was a much happier woman than I would have been had I remained hunched over my computer.

"Thank you," I said to my daughter.

"For what, Mommy?"

"For taking me on a picnic," I said. "Well, you should thank yourself, too. You're the one who said yes."

Parents usually go to "no" as a first response when their children ask for anything outside the master plan.

"No, I don't want you to build a cushion fort in the living room right now; it makes a huge mess."

I've done it. But if a child wants to build a fort or engage in any other activity that promises a transient mess, why not let him or her?

Your little one has an idea and exploring ideas is such an integral ingredient of our kids' development. How else are they going to figure out what works or how to solve their own problems?

Saying "no" comes naturally because we think doing so is without consequences. We're wrong. Not only do we limit our children's personal possibilities, we also compromise many opportunities to bond with them and to show them a different side of ourselves.

So, next time, consider going straight to "yes." I guarantee the experience will be as satisfying and memorable for you as if you had planned the whole thing yourself.

Caesarean births linked to child obesity

New research published in the Archives of Disease in Childhood claims that C-sections may double the risk of childhood obesity. Big news, considering that around one in three babies are born this way in Canada.

The study followed 1,255 mothers and babies between 1999 and 2002. The babies were weighed at birth, six months and age three. Around one in four were C-sections, and those babies tended to weigh more than those from vaginal births.

According to researchers, there is the "difference in the composition of gut bacteria acquired at birth between the two delivery methods." Apparently babies born by C-section have more Firmicutes bacteria and fewer Bacteroides bacteria in their guts. (Obese people have higher levels of Firmicutes bacteria.) It is believed that gut bacteria influences insulin resistance, inflammation and fat deposits.

Another good reason to avoid elective, non-emergency Caesarean births.

Bear, Tupac and Chardonnay are just a few of the wackiest baby names from last year. ISTOCK IMAGES

Weird baby names get even weirder

The folks at Nameberry compiled the hundred wackiest monikers from the last year.

We're talking weird — from the future troublemakers Capone and Juvenal, to Mother Nature's son, Cougar, Fox and Bear. Not to mention the badasses, Tank and Notorious, Marvellous, Famous and Tupac.

For cultural trends, it's Mad Men all the way, with six Draper kids released into the world. Homage to the late Dirty Dancer, Swayze. And Elvis is back (if he ever went away), as are the corresponding names Graceland, Presley and Memphis.

The Royal wedding appears to have left its mark, as the absurdly conjoined Princewilliam, Princemichael and Sircharles will attest.

While the calendar has historically provided baby name inspiration (April, June), it saw some new twists, including Tomorrow, Evening and Future.

Oh, and intoxicants featured, too: Tequila, Chardonnay and (I kid you not) Abeer.

Space mining. Harvesting minerals and other substances from near-Earth asteroids a new possibility

life@metronews.ca

Asteroids contain huge amounts of iron and water, as well as valuable rare metals like platinum. ISTOCK PHOTO

It's a fact of life in the space age. As vital resources become depleted on Earth, an infinite, inexhaustible treasure trove awaits us — from beyond.

Space mining, the harvesting of minerals and other substances from near-Earth asteroids, has traditionally been the realm of science fiction. But now, an innovative company of opportunists is actually trying to make this happen.

"Everything is science fiction, right up to the point where it's science fact," says Chris Lewicki, president and chief engineer of Planetary Resources. "Our approach is to keep our eye on the goal of space resources, and the development of an economy off the planet. There are a number of things that really have only coalesced in the last few years that I think make this a great time to be considering this challenge."

Fuelling this is the discovery of literally thousands of near-Earth asteroids in the past decade. These space-borne hunks contain huge amounts of iron and water, as well as valuable rare metals such as platinum.

"These asteroids have only a very slight amount of gravity," Lewicki explains. "You don't really orbit them as much as you dock with them — like a space craft visiting the International Space Station. The ability to leave that asteroid also doesn't take much energy."

Space exploration requires metal and water in abundance. But they're heavy, and it costs tens of thousands of dollars to lift even one pound of material from Earth into space.

The short-term goal of asteroid mining is to reach for the stars with materials that are already out there.

"We can take something as basic as water, and turn it into rocket fuel. And the ability to refuel in space will be critically important for travelling around the solar system. And the iron you find in space is so pure, it has many of the properties of stainless steel."

This is a whole new level of sustainability — a long-term future built without relying on Earth-bound resources.

"We're looking to make space exploration common place," Lewicki says. "We'll end up with a prospecting spacecraft in Earth's orbit — maybe as soon as five years from now."

The houses that Elio built

Giving something back.
Generous entrepreneur one day decided to use wealth to aid those stricken by poverty

THE IN-CREDIBILITY FACTOR
Teresa Kruze
life@metronews.ca

Elio Madonia was strolling with his wife while on vacation in the Dominican Republic when he turned down the wrong street and walked into a poverty-stricken neighbourhood.

Elio gives his two cents

"We work a lifetime to acquire wealth. Then we look back and say, 'Is this all there is to life?'" All this experience, talent, skill and knowledge is now wasted on the golf courses of the world."

Elio Madonia

Elio Madonia, seen here on the far left, presents a house to a family in need along with a group of donors who helped to build it.

"I pointed my finger at God saying, 'Why do you allow this to happen?' At one point I heard a voice speaking to me. 'If you are really concerned, why don't you do something for them?'"

Elio was a pillar of the Italian community in Toronto and had recently sold his interest in several beverage companies.

He was also newly retired. The mayor of the town donated a piece of land and Elio went to work, building 25 new homes for the families he had met. That was in 1990. Today, Madonia and The Samaritan Group have built and donated 10 villages filled with 1,200 homes, six schools, five medical centres and 12 churches.

"We work a lifetime to acquire wealth. Then we look back and say, 'Is this all there is to life?'All this experience, talent, skill and knowledge is now wasted on the golf courses of the world.

"Help those in need and leave a legacy that will influence the world."

Guide to life

- Let love motivate everything you do.
- In all relationships follow the golden rule: As you would like others to do to you, do likewise to them.
- In all dealings let fairness prevail.
- At all times protect your good name (reputation) for it is worth more than gold.

Better to skip break room and skip to the loo

Germs. 'High degree of contamination' found on 75 per cent of faucets in the rooms where workers go to take a breather

CASSANDRA GARRISON
Metro World News

Hold on to your lunches and get ready for some nauseating news — a study that looked at germ counts in communal office break rooms found that the popular sites of co-worker lunch hours actually happen to be filthier than the average toilet seat.

The research was conducted by Kimberly-Clark Corporation, a company that manufactures cleaning and disinfectant products, and consulted on by University of Arizona microbiologist Charles Gerba, according to Health Day News.

Researchers collected more than 5,000 swabs from office break rooms and their findings will make your skin crawl: 75 per cent of break room faucets, 48 per cent of microwave handles, 26 per cent of refrigerator handles, 23 per cent of water fountain buttons and 21 per cent of vending machine buttons have "high degree of contamination."

That makes the break room the dirtiest hot spot that workers touch in a day at the office.

The study didn't specify on the what types of germs were found in break rooms, but in Gerba's earlier work studying office desk tops, he found germs like diarrhea-causing norovirus, parainfluenza, and drug-resistant staph (MRSA).

"The two things you spread in a break room are office gossip and germs," Gerba said.

How do these germs keep finding their way into the break room?

Through common, everyday occurrences that you probably don't think twice about, like using a dirty sponge to wipe out your coffee cup. "You're really wiping your mug with E. coli," Gerba said.

Another way office employees spread germs is by greeting each other, a common activity when bumping into one another in the break room.

"You'd be better off kissing each other than shaking hands," Gerba said, noting that our palms are loaded with germs that can make us sick.

Do germs spread faster than gossip in your office? ISTOCK

'Dr. Germ'

Desks are dirty, too

Professor Charles Gerba of the University of Arizona's Department of Soil, Water and Environmental Science is a fellow lucky enough to be nicknamed Dr. Germ. His studies of germs in the workplace have shown that the average office desktop has 400 times more bacteria than the office toilet seat.

Gerba's researchers found that a person can leave a nasty trail of viruses on every surface he or she touches — and viruses can live on surfaces for up to three days. They also noted that people who reported cleaning with a disinfectant had 25 per cent fewer bacteria in their offices than those who didn't. This prompted Dr. Germ to recommend using disinfecting wipes daily on surfaces in the office.

Belmont Stakes

"It's all about the horse. As long as the horse is going great, we're all doing good. If he was battling and then I was getting a lot of stuff from other areas, it would be difficult. As long as he's doing good, everything else is just talk."

Doug O'Neill, the trainer of Canadian-owned I'll Have Another, is learning just how difficult it is to avoid all the roadblocks as he prepares his Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner for a chance to become the first Triple Crown champion in 34 years. The 44-year-old trainer shrugs off — at least publicly — the criticism thrown his way for numerous drug and medication violations, including a 45-day suspension issued last week in California. But ever since the colt was put on a van to New York, there have been a number of bumps on the road to the Belmont Stakes, such as a traffic jam on the New Jersey Turnpike. I'll Have Another will not be able to wear the nasal strip he wore when he won the Derby and Preakness. The horse also went without regular exercise rider Jonny Garcia until a week ago because of visa issues.

Woods matches Nicklaus for wins

Tiger Woods picked the right place to match Jack Nicklaus for career PGA Tour wins, and with a shot that even left Nicklaus amazed.

Two shots behind with three holes to play, and his ball in an impossible spot behind the 16th green, Woods holed a flop shot from 50 feet away that turned bogey into birdie and sent him on his way to a stunning comeback Sunday in the Memorial.

It was his fifth win at Muirfield Village, and the 73rd of his PGA Tour career to match Nicklaus at No. 2 all-time. Sam Snead won a record 82 times.

Doughty living his dream with the Kings

NHL. Ontario native has been key in Los Angeles' 14-2 record on run to Stanley Cup

The seed was planted in Drew Doughty's mind long before he got this close to the summit.

As a kid who grew up worshipping the Los Angeles Kings, the slick defenceman always envisioned himself helping lead the organization to a Stanley Cup.

"Before I was even drafted I had a ton of meetings with the L.A. Kings staff," Doughty recalled Sunday at the Kings practice facility. "Every single one of those meetings, Dean always brought it up to me: 'Are you going to be that guy to help us win that first Stanley Cup in franchise history?' My answer was always 'Yes.'"

The Kings are oh-so-close to making it a reality.

With a pair of 2-1 overtime victories over the New Jersey Devils to open the championship series, Los Angeles flew back across the continent with an opportunity to wrap it up at Staples Center. This is bordering on fantasyland stuff for Doughty, who grew up in London as a Kings fanatic and owned small black-and-silver replica sweaters bearing the names "Gretzky" and "Hrudey."

Those two men were key players in the Kings' only other previous trip to the Stanley Cup final, which ended with a five-game loss to Montreal in 1993.

The current group has gone further than any team in the franchise's 44-year history. Doughty's contributions have been impossible to ignore throughout the playoffs and he's taken it to another level at the most important time — logging a team-high 32 minutes of ice time in Game 2 and scoring a highlight-reel goal to boot.

These are exciting times for a Kings team that has steamrolled its competition and only dropped two games since the regular season ended in early April. It would take an upset of historic proportions for New Jersey to win the series.

Of the last six Stanley Cup finals that began with the road team winning the opening two games, five ended in sweeps. The other was over in five games.

"We really believe we can win a game tomorrow night," Devils coach Peter Deboer said. "If we do, it's a different series."

Blue Jays slugger Jose Bautista gave Toronto starter Drew Hutchison an early lead by blasting a three-run homer in the first inning.

It was more than enough support for the rookie right-hander, who held the Boston Red Sox to five hits over seven innings as Toronto avoided a sweep with a 5-1 victory Sunday afternoon at Rogers Centre.

"Hutch continues to mature right in front of our eyes," said Blue Jays manager John Farrell. "Staked to a five-run lead, he kept going out and putting up zeroes and keeping the momentum on our side."

The Blue Jays added two more runs in the second inning to chase Daniel Bard.

Toronto (28-26) ended a two-game skid with the victory and moved into a tie with fourth-place Boston (28-26). Both clubs are three games behind the first-place Tampa Bay Rays in the tight American League East.

Solid outing

Hutchison (5-2), allowed one earned run, walked one and struck out five. It was his fourth win in five games and lowered his earned-run average to 4.35.

"Once again I was able to find my arm slot and get into a good rhythm out there," Hutchison said. "The offence did a great job putting numbers on the board early. I just stayed with (catcher) J.P. (Arencibia) really and the defence was playing great so it was another good outing."

Bautista connected on a 3-2 pitch for his 14th homer of the season.

"When he stays with a consistent approach and he has an understanding of what the strike zone is going to be, he's one of the most feared hitters in baseball," Farrell said.

Ricky Ray embraces Argos' high-tempo training camp

CFL. 75 players look to win one of 46 spots on Toronto's roster under new head coach

There was a lot of huffing and puffing on Day 1 of the Toronto Argonauts training camp and no one appreciated the high-tempo pace more than quarterback Ricky Ray.

"This has been pretty new for me. This is my 10th year and I've never been around a head coach who preaches this kind of tempo in a system that is pretty complex like this one," Ray, 31, said on Sunday.

About 20 minutes into first of two practice sessions, head coach Scott Milanovich had Ray running a no-huddle offence with scrimmages soon following. It looked as if the Boatmen were in a mid-season session instead of the first day of training camp at the University of Toronto's Mississauga campus.

But that's the way things operated in Montreal where Milanovich ran the offence for the past four years, and the 75 players looking to win one of the 46 spots on the Argos better get used to it quickly.

"I think it's definitely going to benefit us in the long run," said Ray, the team's undisputed No. 1 QB, who was traded in the off-season from the Edmonton Eskimos where he threw for 24 TDs and 4,594 yards in 2011. "We've seen how Montreal has gotten off to hot starts almost every year and I think it has a lot to do with the tempo they have in their practices, which we're using now.

"The biggest strength of Scott is his communication skills. He's so direct. He lays everything out in front of you. He doesn't like to leave anything up to guess work. We know exactly what to expect when we come out here and guys aren't surprised."

As training camp progresses, one of the big things that will emerge is who will be Ray's No. 1 target as the team tries to rebound from a last-place 6-12 finish from a year ago in the East.

You might be Overpaying for Car Insurance

There are ways to save without impacting coverage

Each insurance company charges a different rate to insure the same driver with the same exact coverage – and these rates vary considerably. By not shopping around for car insurance, you could be paying hundreds, or even thousands, of dollars more than you should. Insurers use their own claims experience to determine their rates and each company will have a different history with each driving profile and car combination. This could mean that you are overpaying for car insurance – and with so many insurance companies, odds are you may not be currently insured with the company that offers the best rate for your driving profile.

The car you drive, where you live, where you drive, and your driving record are all factors that may affect your insurance rate. While most of these items are under your control, others such as the insurance company's experience and corresponding rates are not. One insurance company may charge more for being insured in your postal code, while others may charge more for insuring sport cars. Understanding all of these considerations and knowing that each insurance company charges different rates will help you find the best car insurance rate that suits your needs.

The best way to save on your car insurance is to compare your insurance rate to those offered by other companies. But it can be extremely time consuming to compare the rates individually and brokers only offer rates from 4 to 5 different companies. Web sites like InsuranceHotline.com make it easy to compare your rate against the lowest available rates within their network of over 30 insurance companies.

It's not just about saving you money.
Wait, it is.

Top-seeded Djokovic shaky in French Open victory

Novak Djokovic of Serbia returns in his fourth-round match against Andreas Seppi of Italy at the French Open on Sunday. BERNAT ARMANGUE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rally. Top-seeded man survives scare to come back from two sets down

Novak Djokovic won even though he felt like nothing was working.

A much less-known player named David Goffin lost, but he walked out of Roland Garros feeling like the luckiest guy in the world. It was a strange, grey Sunday at the French Open that didn't always fit the script — and even included an early exit by the top-seeded woman, Victoria Azarenka.

The top-seeded man, Djokovic, punctuated the weirdness, in need of his third career comeback from two sets down to post a fourth-round victory over 22nd-seeded Andreas Seppi of Italy, 4-6, 6-7 (5), 6-3, 7-5, 6-3.

"Today, I played a very poor match," Djokovic said.

Goffin, in the draw as a "lucky loser" after falling in qualifying, found himself with a one-set lead against none other than his childhood favourite, Roger Federer, before falling 5-7, 7-5, 6-2, 6-4. At the end, the 21-year-old got a hug from the 16-time major champion that left him smiling.

"I've had an extraordinary week," he said. "I went through the quallies with a bit of luck. Then I played my best tennis. I played three great matches. The icing on the cake was to play here with Roger."

Other than the fact that he grinded it out and won, and that his hopes of winning his fourth straight Grand Slam tournament — the "Novak Slam" — are still alive, Djokovic conceded there wasn't much to build on from this win, his 25th straight in the majors. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Daniel Nestor

- The 39-year-old from Toronto will play in the semifinals against Australian Matthew Ebden and American partner Ryan Harrison.
